

Jewish University To Train Rabbis, Journalists Proposed

WASHINGTON.—A University of Jewish Studies to train all who engage in professional Jewish activities is advocated by Rabbi David Polish, director of the B'nai B'rith Hillel Foundation at Cornell University, in the December issue of The National Jewish Monthly, published by B'nai B'rith.

"This university," he writes, "would consist of various colleges which would train students for the rabbinate, social work, education, etc. Only graduates of the university would be engaged or supported in the communities where they would be called upon to function."

All too often, Rabbi Polish declares in his article, Jewish social workers, teachers, journalists and other communal servants not only lack an adequate Jewish background, but fall far below professional standards in their fields as well.

Would Bring Variety

Such an institution, he writes, would "hasten a most desirable and, to my mind, inevitable process. It would precipitate the emergence of a single form of Jewish religious expression in America. It is not enough to hope for a merger of the Hebrew Union College with the Jewish Institute of Religion. There must be a union not only of schools, but of sects. Specific reference is made here to Reform and Conservative Judaism. The distinctions between the two are becoming increasingly indistinguishable."

In his article, Rabbi Polish makes the following charges:

"Too many of our Sunday and Hebrew school teachers cannot meet the requirements of professional standards."

"Jewish social work is all too often not Jewish."

"The vacuous and fatuous character of too great a portion of our Anglo-Jewish press calls for a Jewishly trained and motivated fourth estate."

"One field of our contemporary life which has been totally neglected urgently requires development. We shall call it Jewish civil service."

He charges further that "the vast majority of our communal workers" lack adequate Jewish training; that American Jewry has so far provided few inducements for our more brilliant and capable youth to make a career of service to their people; and that there is little correlation between the various phases of American Jewish life.

Thus spoke the Honorable Alben W. Barkley, U. S. Senator from Kentucky and majority leader in the U. S. Senate to Dr. Israel Goldstein as a thousand delegates and guests attending the National Conference of the Jewish National Fund in St. Louis, Mo., recently, looked on. Mr. Fried Takes Us to Task Lightly

To the Editor:

No statement, such as you make with reference to the State Association of B'nai B'rith lodges, in the issue of Nov. 22, should be passed up unnoticed and unanswered. The statement in its entirety is a gross misconception of the writer's knowledge of State Association history. It is compiled by one who knows very little of the work the past and present officers of the Association have done, and are doing; their sacrifices in time and money for which they are not reimbursed. This in itself should be sufficient evidence that glory or "kavod" is not the only thing that enters into becoming "big shots," as you call them.

We all admit that David Rubin, our mutual young friend, prepared a splendid paper. And the paper certainly was not ignored. You, Mr. Cohen, did not attend the Lafayette executive meeting and consequently you are misinforming your readers as to what took place. The fact is, the paper was discussed at length and was constructive and beneficial to all those present. Good will come from the suggestions of Brother Rubin. One man, regardless of how much we think of that brother, cannot change the methods of electing its officers by presenting a few well-meant statements. These things take time.

Let's go farther. Are you perchance looking for a job in the Association? If you are, all you require is to contact one of the "cliques" that dominate the state affairs, and I'm sure you will be elected. In fact, I will vote for you. You have attended our conventions, and if you were attentive, after the report of the nominating committee, you would have heard the president call for nominations from the floor. Of course, if you were outside the convention hall, perhaps having tea, then I, for one, will forgive you the statement that certain individuals dominate the affairs of the State Association.

Why shouldn't they look after the interest of something that they have worked for—worked hard, too—traveling the state from the Calumet to the Ohio River, spending their own money for the interest of B'nai B'rith? Yep, they have been doing this for many, many years; yes, even about the time you were wearing three-cornered trousers, my good friend.

These boys whom you accuse of dominating the State Association did not do all these things for self-glory, and they are not doing it for that today. They are trying to keep our Order alive; keep the spark burning; keep lodges from going stale. Who knows better who is capable of doing a good job leading the Association than those terrible cliques that you so well describe?

Judge for yourself and analyze it as you look over the present officers, all young, ambitious and raring to do something for B'nai B'rith. From these officers and directors, the membership will continue to pick its future leaders. Is that not what Brother Rubin's paper suggested?

Certainly, Reuben Berman, our president, has some real ideas for pepping up the State Association. Why shouldn't he? He is one who has been in line for several years for the job he now holds. He was groomed for the job; served as director for several years, worked for his honors, and now the Association will benefit by his leadership. So, you see, he never twiddled his thumbs while he was director and vice president for three years.

I still contend that the cliques that dominate our State Association affairs "know their onions" and have foresight for State Association presidential timber, regardless of what the editor of The Post thinks. The cliques picked Sammy Mantel from the rank and file of the State Association. He served his stewardship as director and vice president in the Association. You must admit, the cliques did not do such a bad job in Sammy Mantel. Furthermore, I am happy to tip you off, the cliques have some more Sammy Mantels up their sleeves, but they made no promises to anyone, as you claim.

Were I chairman of any of the past nominating committees, I would challenge you to prove your statement that the jobs of third vice presidents have already been promised for the next five years. Such a statement is unbecoming from the editor of a newspaper.

In conclusion, please be informed that whenever you see fit to publish anything referring to the Association that is not facts, I, for one, will take issue with you. But, whenever you find it in your heart to say something nice, I will be the first to congratulate the editor of The Post in the most appreciable manner.

ANDREW FRIED.

Secretary-Treasurer Indiana-Kentucky State Association.

Editor's Note: Here's a good start. How about some of the lay members, who feel as Rubin and I, answering our good friend, Mr. Fried? Just as a start, but with no malice whatever, let me state, as a matter of fact, that the present third vice president was promised his office in Fort Wayne last year, and that the next third vice presidency, too, has already been promised by certain "big shots."

Vatican Radio Assails France's Anti-Semitism

By Jewish Telegraphic Agency
VATICAN CITY.—The Vatican Radio has assailed growing racialism in France in a broadcast which stressed the "living connection between Judaism and Christianity." The broadcast, in French, denounced the "tendency to believe there is a special God for special races." It pointed out that to support that racial theory the Holy Scriptures had to be censored, the Old Testament eliminated and elements of the New Testament proving the "living connection between Judaism and Christianity" had to be disclaimed.

Popularly dubbed, "Saint Wilson," the statue often was adorned with flowers even after the German occupation . . . that is, until a soldier was placed there to halt the hero worship. Time setting of the picture is 1937. Today, they say, there is no Woodrow Wilson station . . . it has been renamed by the "new order."

Rabbinate of France Protests Anti-Semitism

VICHY.—A dignified but strong protest against the anti-Jewish statute of Oct. 18 has been addressed to the Government by the French rabbinate, it was reliably learned.

A national relief campaign was inaugurated among the Jewish population by Chief Rabbi Issaye Schwartz in a sermon at the Vichy Temple. The rabbi protested against the French anti-Semitic legislation, charging it had struck a painful blow to the Jews and was "not merited," but appealed to the Jewish population to fulfill its duties as "men and Frenchmen."

Berlin-Lisbon Train Service To Be Started

By Jewish Telegraphic Agency
LISBON.—A direct train from Germany to Lisbon carrying German Jews for emigration from Lisbon to overseas lands will be started in 1941, according to an announcement made by the German railway administration in Berlin.

This step will not represent any particular concession to the Jews. It is being undertaken by the Nazi administration as a measure to spur emigration of Jews from the Reich. Jewish organizations in Lisbon consider it, however, as a development which will greatly widen the scope of Jewish emigration activities.

Rutenberg's Program Runs Into Opposition

By Jewish Telegraphic Agency

JERUSALEM.—Authorized quarters stated the executives of the Jewish Agency and Zionist Organization did not agree with Pinchas Rutenberg's program for Palestine Jewish unity. These sources said that the executives had not been informed of Rutenberg's proposals before their public announcement on Nov. 7.

It was also stated that the Jewish Agency and Zionist executives did not share or support the view expressed by Rutenberg that the American Jewish press did not have the right to interfere with Palestine Jewish affairs. It was stressed that this was solely Rutenberg's personal view.

The opposition of the Histadruth, Jewish labor federation, to Rutenberg's program was voiced by Berl Katznelson, member of the Histadruth executive and editor of the labor daily Davar, in a public address in Tel Aviv.

ALLEY TRASH

By Jack Falk

When "Congress" functions properly, the result is victory over "defeat." To elucidate, Bob Congress the popular young manager of the renowned Adam Hat Store, located at 9 North Meridian street, was doing some "overhead" shooting and "topped" the fellows competing for the prize of a pair of bowling shoes, donated by Phil Stern. Bob said, after his win, "Now I'm covered from head to foot!"

Next week Sidney X. Herwitz of Essex Hosiery fame, will be the donor of a gift certificate good for merchandise in his new store at 148 West Washington street. Here's a good opportunity for a lucky bowler to "stock up" a bit, and possibly get a "run" for his "socking" the pins! "Tain't funny, McGee!"

It has been suggested that a bowling tournament for all the Indiana lodges of B'nai B'rith would create unlimited interest and good fellowship. There is no reason why this idea cannot materialize. (Continued on page 7)

A Matter of Politics

WELL, the election is all over and has fallen deep into the abysses of time. So I may safely speak about it. During the weeks of the campaign it took all my self-restraint to hold me back from utterance on the subject.

But with admirable control I said to myself, No, Segal, not a word! Not a word until it's all over for several weeks. You can't afford to be publicly the partisan who sticks his neck out. He who sticks his neck out may get his head chopped off.

Even now, weeks later, I am cautious as not to declare publicly in this column how I voted; though whoever looked over my shoulder in the secrecy of the voting place could have detected me voting for Roosevelt. But that is a matter strictly confidential between me and my conscience.

There was a certain day in the campaign when I almost was consumed by anger which I could not allow myself to get out of my system at the time. Had I done so I would have been called a New Deal agent using the columns of the Jewish press to further a political cause.

What made me so angry that day was to receive a certain pamphlet from the National Republican Committee in New York. It is not that I am an intolerant man who resents being approached by pamphlets of contrary opinion. But this political pamphlet came to me as a Jew; it brought me the appeal of other Jews, who, as Jews, attempted to influence my vote as an American citizen.

I would not have been so angry about it had it been a forthright appeal to Jews by the Republican National Committee. Then I would have said, "Well, these people don't know any better. I must forgive them."

But this pamphlet contained several dozen statements of political affiliation signed by Jews. Nor were they Jews of whom it might have been said: "The damfools! It takes all kinds of Jews to make the community. These don't seem to know any better than to lend their Jewish names to political purposes."

THE signers of this pamphlet were big rabbis, big lawyers, big business people—big Jewish leaders. It was quite obvious that they had been selected for this political purpose precisely because of their leadership in Israel.

They were of that group that has been heard rightfully deploring when Judaism has been seen mixing in politics. They have despised the little ward-heeler who employs his Judaism for vote-getting. Their finely balanced sense of propriety suffers acutely whenever they hear of a police judge or some other non-Jewish politician being the guest of honor at the dedication of a synagogue.

They always have been the foremost champions of the idea that it is prostitution to lend the Jewish name to any purpose of politics. They are of those who are often heard insisting that the Jews are not a people separate from the communion of democracy who must be separately appealed to.

They have always been quick to point out that there is no Jewish vote and have resented as insult any appeal that suggested that there is a Jewish vote.

Yet here they were addressing me through the agency of a political committee, saying to me in effect: "Mr. Segal, you are a Jew and we are Jews. Brethren, in fact. Since we are all Jews together you must believe us when we tell you that Mr. Willkie is the man for President."

I would have resented them as much if, as Jews, they had come to tell me that Roosevelt was the man that I, as Jew, should vote for. In fact, I had no partisan feeling again Mr. Willkie. I regarded him, and still regard him, an honest, able and patriotic citizen and I wouldn't have felt any pain had he been elected President.

Nor did I hold it against him that these prominent Jews Jewishly came to me to ask me to vote for him. I held it only against them and their leadership in Israel. Their leadership, as I understand it, is the gift of the Jewish people who have faith in them. It must not be used for any but Jewish purposes.

But it is only fair to inquire why these leaders slipped this once from their lofty elevation. This brings up a matter which was whispered during the campaign, and of which it is now—several weeks later—timely to speak. It was the widely spread report that nearly all Jews were voting for Roosevelt; it was whispered with prejudicial purpose against Roosevelt; it frightened many a Jewish citizen who heard it; it caused some of them to say: "We must be careful! We must certainly be careful!"

One of them, in fact, said it to me. Yes, we should watch our step, he warned. Jews who were for Roosevelt should keep quiet about it. He said that Rabbi Stephen S. Wise particularly was a menace to Israel, coming out as boldly as he did for Roosevelt. As for himself, he was for Willkie not only because he liked Willkie, but because it was being said that Jews were for Roosevelt.

I gather that our leaders thought they were serving Israel when this galaxy of them came out jointly in this public way for Mr. Willkie. Their big names would be the testimony that not all Israel was involved in the crime of voting for Roosevelt! Here were Israel's biggest men on the other side!

I myself didn't care who knew I was voting for Roosevelt. In the column I write in the daily press I advertised widely that I was voting for him. If I permit fear to control my rights as an American citizen I am voluntarily yielding to the civil restrictions that anti-Semitism would impose upon me if it could. My right is to speak my opinion publicly on any public matter and I am not yet recognizing any power in America that can curtail this right.

The political pamphlet of our big leaders contained the faint stuffy smell of long dead times when "hofjuden" did their best to curry favor for themselves and Israel in the palace.

However, I shall continue to follow these leaders over the top in all the drives, as I have been doing these many years. I shall sit at their feet and look up to their gleaming shirt bosoms as they sit at the speakers' tables at many a Jewish dinner to come. I shall forgive them but I hope that in the future they will use their Jewish leadership only for Jewish purposes.

WAR ECHOES

American correspondents in Berlin don't like to attend the Goebbels' banquets, even though extra food is served. Cards are issued to all present at the press conferences. One reporter, however, goes every time on the theory that any extra food he eats means so much less for the German army. . . . In Germany, comments a wag after reading about the new edict legalizing dog meat for human consumption, it's now a case of dog eat dog.

SCHOLASTIC NOTES

Professor Erwin R. Goodenough of Yale has dedicated his new book, "An Introduction to Philo Judaeus," to the staff of the Jewish Theological Seminary of America, who in person demonstrate that Christian ethic has its source in Judaism. . . . At Indiana University we learn from Dean C. E. Edmondson's report that the highest scholastic record during this year's spring session was piled up by the Sigma Alpha Mu Fraternity, while second place went to Phi Beta Delta. These two are the only Jewish fraternities on the campus. . . . Note to the Publicity Department of the College of the City of New York: Max J. Kohler, the famous lawyer who was a member of your class of 1890 and whom you listed among those expected to attend your associate alumni dinner last week, died quite a number of years ago.

ABOUT PEOPLE

Gotham's Republicans frankly hope that Park Commissioner Robert Moses will be New York City's next mayor. . . . Among the prominent non-Aryans who didn't make good their threats to close up shop at the event of President Roosevelt's re-election is banker Jules Kohn. . . . If peace should be established between the C. I. O. and the A. F. of L. it will be David Dubinsky, head of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, which is affiliated with neither group, who will be credited with making the breach. . . . Anne Kaufman is only 15 years old, but she already has seen her name signed in an article published in "Fashion." It comes natural to Anne, though—her father, playwright George S. Kaufman, and her mother, playwright Beatrice Kaufman, are both adepts at the literary game. . . . Hoping to appear on Broadway in a straight dramatic role before long is dancer Dagmar Adamsky, daughter of the late master musician Leopold Godowsky. . . . Louis Nizer, whose recent published "Thinking on Your Feet" is proving a boon to toastmasters throughout the land, worked his way through college by teaching English to immigrants in night school. . . . Latest scout to investigate South American possibilities for movie-making is Samuel Goldwyn, off on a good neighbor tour. . . . Theatrical producer Otto Ludwig Preminger is rapidly becoming Americanized, we note. Latest evidence is his dropping of his "Dr." title, an appellation which, while customary in Europe, is a bit out of place on Broadway.

BRAZILIAN INFORMATION

Did you know that the pilot and interpreter for Pedro Alvares de Cabral, who discovered Brazil in 1500, was a Polish Jew who had been forcibly baptized by explorer Vasco da Gama and given the name Gaspar da Gama? . . . That the Brazilian island Noronha was named after Fernando de Noronha, a Portuguese Marrano who with six shiploads of his coreligionists settled in Brazil three or four years later? . . . That it was Jews and Marranos who first brought sugar and tobacco to Portugal from Brazil? . . . And that when the Dutch, in 1630, captured Recife (now Pernambuco), the Marranos stopped pretending and lived openly as Jews? . . . The main street of Recife at that time was popularly known as Rua des Judios, and the town itself was often called Cais des Judios, which means "port of the Jews." . . . When the Portuguese recaptured the city, however, most of the Jews left Recife for Holland, while a handful found their way to New York in 1654. Those Jews who remained in Recife as Marranos eventually became true Catholics, but many old Brazilian families still have typical Spanish and Portuguese Jewish names. . . . A curious incident occurred some centuries later, when, in 1887, a committee of Alsatian Jews visited Emperor Dom Pedro II. . . . As a compliment to his visitors the emperor, who was quite a scholar, started to address them in Hebrew—but not a single one of the Jews could understand what he said. . . . And, lest you think that we've been engaging an army of sleuths to unearth this interesting information, let us confess right here and now that we've garnered all this knowledge from the recently published second volume of the Universal Jewish Encyclopedia.

Mr. Lawrence Cooper of Chicago visited with Mr. and Mrs. S. Braun and daughter Dorothy last week. Miss Braun spent Monday and Tuesday of this week in Cincinnati as the guest of Miss Virginia Kramer, national secretary of the National Council of Jewish Juniors and a past-president of the Mid-Eastern Conference.

In attendance at the Indiana State Medical Association's Convention at French Lick recently were: Dr. and Mrs. Sidney Aronson, Dr. and Mrs. Leon Levy, Dr. and Mrs. I. J. Kwitney, Dr. and Mrs. Edgar F. Kiser and Dr. B. Kraft and Dr. Bernard Hyman.

We are still anxious to obtain the services of some kindhearted individual, male or female, to volunteer as "foul" person at our Sunday morning sessions. Perhaps the reason we have had no response to our plea is due to the misinterpretation of the name "foul"! A "foul-man," in the bowling sense, is one who observes those in the act of approaching the alley when throwing the ball, and calls an error if the bowler steps over the black line between the runway and alley proper. Now, you see, there is nothing so terrible about that!

Special BLOOMINGTON.—Tomorrow night within the chapter house eighty-five couples will dance to the music of Zeke Shapiro and his popular campus band on the occasion of Sigma Alpha Mu's nineteenth annual pledge formal dance.

The theme of the dance will be "Sigma Alpha Mu Goes to Hades," with decorations being arranged accordingly. Dummy figures of the fifteen pledges will be placed around the fireplace while the walls will be covered with the "fire and brimstone," reminiscent of the lower regions.

Sunday afternoon the fratres, pledges and their respective feminine guests will gather at the annual post-dance banquet at the Graham Hotel, at which time the group will hear from our prior, Manuel Frank Rothberg, our pledge president, Sidney Cahn, and will be entertained by the chapter's choral group, which consists of twelve picked voices under the direction of (Continued on page 8)

The Editor's Chair:

The girl in Mr. Isidore Feibleman's office happened to read in his copy of The Jewish Post the "chair" which told of the sale of Father Coughlin's Social Justice at St. Joan of Arc's Church, Forty-second and Central avenue. A Catholic, she purposefully attended mass there the following Sunday, and reported back to Mr. Feibleman that no copies of Social Justice were on sale at the church door.

That was good news, and for a while, what with my expanded ego, I thought that perhaps the "chair" had had something to do with the removal of the publication from the portals of the church. So this Sunday morning I stopped at St. Joan of Arc's and the boy selling papers there pulled out a copy of Social Justice and sold me one.

Most people in Indiana like Andy Fried. All B'nai B'rith members in the state love Andrew Fried. He has been secretary-treasurer of the Association for almost twenty years, and is as well known throughout Indiana Jewish communities as any other Indiana Jew.

I like Andrew Fried, and The Jewish Post likes Andrew Fried. I like him for a number of reasons. But I think I like him most because is frank and unaffected. Comparable with that of only one man in Indiana that I know, is Andy's interest in B'nai B'rith. He probably would prefer to see B'nai B'rith get ahead than to get promoted to national president of Western Union. That's just the kind of a man he is.

I believe that Andy also has in his makeup a regard for The Post, not a little of which grows out of his knowledge that The Post believes and has often stated in its columns that the B'nai B'rith is the one best and finest Jewish organization in the United States, excepting of course rabbinical groups.

As a result, when Andy thinks that The Post should be set aright in its editorial attitude towards the B'nai B'rith, he takes his pen in hand and writes us just such a letter as you see printed in our "Freedom of the Press" column this week.

Andy recognizes the right of The Post to make constructive criticisms. If The Post believes that a change should be made in the method of nominating in the State Association, he grants it the right to say so. Comment from State B'nai B'rith members on the issue would be interesting, so The Post hopes that it will receive other letters next week.

A State B'nai B'rith Bowling Tourney

THE SUGGESTION contained in the B'nai B'rith column conducted by Jack Falk that a state league or bowling tournament be organized, certainly deserves consideration. Most Indiana lodges already have bowling leagues, and many of them play inter-lodge matches. A state tournament, much on the order of the national tournament definitely is indicated.

Mr. Falk, who is an enthusiastic bowler, has done a splendid job directing the Indianapolis league. He is willing to devote his energies to a State tourney provided enough response to his announcement is forthcoming.

Bowling committee chairman can send their comment on the suggestion directly to this paper, and the sentiment for such a move can in this way be gauged not only by those intimately interested but by B'nai B'rith officers, too.

The Post Harps On An Old Ideal

REMEMBER the editorials The Post used to write, when it had more faith than it has now, about a State Rabbinical Association for Indiana. Well last week the Ohio Jewish Chronicle reported the organization of a Board of Jewish Ministers for Columbus. Aims of the group would be, according to The Chronicle, "to further Judaism and Jewish education as well as to enable rabbis to co-operate more effectively for community service." The rabbis discussed such matters, The Chronicle said, as a campaign to recruit children for the religious schools of the city, religious services for the draftees to be stationed at Fort Hayes, and the organization of an Institute of Jewish Education, to be staffed by themselves.

Certainly all those objectives are objectives which an Indiana Rabbinical Association could logically be expected to achieve. In addition, problems peculiar to Indiana Jewish communities could be discussed and problems affecting the Jewish community of the State as a whole could be thrashed out.

Many State rabbis have expressed their approval of such an Association. What is needed is someone to take the initiative.

U. S. Zionists Get Business Management

IT BEGINS to look as if the Zionist membership drive now in progress, and upon which The Post said editorially some weeks back will be judged the support given to Mr. Edmund I. Kauffman's administration, will be a big success. It will be a success for the same reason that the B'nai B'rith or Block's Department Store are successful.

The Zionist organization under Mr. Kaufman, who is president of the chain of Kay Jewelry stores, has become a well-managed concern, with proper executives, proper publicity, and proper management.

Current Comment

Maurice Samuels Discusses His Own Recently Published Book, "The Great Hatred."—The so-called "Jewish question" is the most dangerous and most misleading phenomenon of modern times. If I were asked to give a brief description of anti-Semitism to a man who had never heard of it, I would not say that anti-Semitism is hatred of the Jew. I would say instead that it is the scourge of Christendom, the most widespread, the most catastrophic mental disease that has ever afflicted the civilization of the West. Anti-Semitism is a Christian problem. If I were to condense the message of my book [The Great Hatred] in a slogan, it is this: "Christians of the world, solve the anti-Semitic problem, or you will perish!"

The trouble is that Jews and Christians alike are content with carrying on a defensive. If there is one thing that the war has now taught us, it is that passive defense, which leaves the initiative with the enemy, is almost certain defeat. The latest phase of the war has shown us this truth with awful clarity. How has England been saved from invasion? By seeking out and destroying the centers from which Nazi Germany sought to launch her attack. How was France defeated? Largely by being duped into sitting behind the Maginot line.

Two lessons are clear: one is that anti-Semitism is aimed at the destruction of human liberty everywhere. Two, that anti-Semitism to be defeated must be attacked. The nests, the breeding places, the mobilization centers of anti-Semitism must be uprooted. There must be an ideological offensive.

Why He Thinks Nazi Anti-Semitism Will Taper Off, Told By William Zuckerman, Noted European Correspondent.—To use a historical illustration, the Jewish problem was to the Nazis in the field of propaganda what Belgium was supposed to have been to the Kaiser in the field of military operations, a stepping-stone to the capture of Paris and the domination of Europe. If this is true—and the entire history of Nazism is confirmation of the view—the war has introduced a definite change into the situation. For those larger aims of Germany have now been in the main achieved. The Nazis have reached their Paris; they are now masters of the continent of Europe. Anti-Jewish feeling has served its purpose and can be relegated to its proper place. The Nazi edifice is ready, and the scaffolding can be removed.

This does not mean that the Nazis have had a change of heart toward the Jews, or that there is hope that they will abandon anti-Semitism in the future. But it does mean that the fierce, almost morbid concentration on anti-Semitic propaganda as an instrument of political, economic, and diplomatic policy is bound to diminish because it is no longer necessary and also, perhaps, because very few people are now left who can be taken in by this obvious bluff. The Jewish problem is being absorbed by a bigger problem.

BOOKS

BY RABBI MAURICE GOLDBLATT

The Synagogue in the Present Crisis, Jacob D. Schwarz, Union of American Hebrew Congregations, Cincinnati, 50 cents.

This 74 page booklet will supply the answers to the questions you may have asked about the role that the Synagogue can play in American Jewish life today. It is a concise treatment of the challenging issues of our times as they affect our Jewish community.

Some of us have allowed ourselves to become so indifferent about the Synagogue and Judaism that we don't realize what they mean to us. Rabbi Schwarz points out in a simple, direct manner that everything we hold dear and meaningful in our world today is a product of the Synagogue. Call the roll of the issues over which the battle is being fought: democracy, freedom, free will and choice of religion, education, politics, the supremacy of the individual! There is not one that is not bound up with the future of the Synagogue even as they have found their origin in the Synagogue.

Obviously, the Synagogue must continue to serve the Jew through its traditional functions, "worship, education and fellowship." Jews must be counted in the Synagogue. Then, all of our community projects will be cast in the spirit of Judaism and the Synagogue. We will not be plagued with Jewish ignorance of things Jewish. Perhaps, most important of all, we shall be fortified with an inner courage that will enable us to withstand the shattering blows against civilization.

About the size of a "Reader's Guide," this little volume will provide just the kind of guide that many of us need for these troubled times.

Fra Doovid Barskin, in the singing of several fraternity songs.

When the fifty-five fratres and pledges returned to the chapter house last Monday evening after the Thanksgiving vacation, they were greeted by the sight of the Old Oaken Bucket, which had been residing in the S. A. M. house at Purdue for too many years. The bucket, which is a replica of the one exchanged between Indiana and Purdue each year to the winner of the annual gridiron classic, is an old tradition for the two Sigma Alpha Mu chapters in the state.

HILLEL

BLOOMINGTON—The Indiana Hillel Foundation is all set for the part of the Hillel Night program which is being presented at Klinebaum Center on Sunday evening under the sponsorship of the Indianapolis B'nai B'rith. Morris Goldberg of New Castle and Ben Weinstein of Indianapolis are holding the affirmative in the debate, "Resolved, That opportunity for free speech should be denied those who advocate religious or racial discrimination in the United States." Purdue will uphold the negative side.

The Hillel Players, under direction of Miss Shirley Fine, will present a one-act play, "Town Tonight." The same play will be given at the Friday evening side.
